

Sustainable Global Warming!

(Really?)

11th International Internet Conference for students aged 14+

► Get the unique experience of an international internet conference! Students from many countries, international experts and the conference team are waiting for you! Join our conference, work and discuss from any internet computer worldwide, at your school, at home or in your internet café!

From 28 April 2010, 16:00 UTC
until 29 April 2010, 16:00 UTC
(Check what this is in your local time on our website!)

► Global warming and sustainability – two key issues of today. But: Can global warming be sustainable? Can there be a sustainable life in times of global warming? Let us discuss this during our next internet conference. Let us find ways towards a more sustainable life, let us find options to cope with global warming and its effects. We are looking forward to discussing these questions together. Worldwide. At our next conference!

► Again in 2010: Interactive pages and a resolution. From today on, work with our interactive pages as a tool for your individual conference preparation. Upload your own contributions for all other participants! Work with “Sustainable Global Warming! (Really?)”, be prepared when the conference starts and take part in the decision making during the worldwide conference. The Agenda 21 NOW! Resolution will be presented to UNESCO and to the public in May 2010.

► Agenda 21 NOW! is an annual telecommunication project initiated by a team of teachers and students from currently six schools* in five countries and is also a pilot project of the German UNESCO Associated Schools.
